

New blogger? Brilliant Blogger?

Fortunately, there will always be someone that knows more than us.
Otherwise, we would not have a source for learning...

This post is dedicated to:

each and every new blogger out there who works hard at a successful blog and all the brilliant bloggers out there who are so willing to share their expertise!

Click here to save this post for later in your blogging board on Pinterest.

New Blogger on the Block

I am by no means a blogging expert. And, no matter what the niche we choose as new bloggers, we have to learn all the tips and tricks to make a success of it.

Are you also trying to learn the blogging ropes? Then you will know spending time online teaches us something new every day. You also know we need to read gazillions of blog posts, free resources and emails to try and find our feet in the challenging new blogger space.

I am enjoying every minute of it, though. You? As you have probably also realized, being a new blogger is not easy.

It is downright time consuming and hard work. And, when we want to be successful:

- we need to have the dedication
- motivation and
- a craving for knowledge.

And, we need a crapload of each of these!

New Blogger Dedication

What makes you dedicated? Is it like me, the love for being a stay at home mommy, allowing us to always be there for our kids.

How blogging changed my life

Being an awesome mommy is great, but being able to also blog productively makes me feel like an awesome woman!

I continue to learn new blogging skills and at the same time share my health and parenting knowledge with others. This shapes me daily, bit-by-bit, into a better blogger and it's also my creative outlet. I can write and hopefully help others, whilst satisfying my own personal aspirations. The perfect solution! Is it the same for you?

New Blogger Motivation

We can not succeed at anything when we are not motivated. My motivation is fueled by my loving husband who believes in me and supports every crazy blogging or product idea I come up with. Wants to know an easy way to find some motivation?

Read the success stories from other bloggers. It will inspire you to keep going and do even better.

New Blogger Craving for Knowledge

Finding blogging know-how is easy in the wealth of blogging tips and advice that is so kindly and freely shared by more experienced bloggers. There are loads of fellow bloggers willing to share their information with us newbie bloggers.

If they were to keep all their success and experience only to themselves, we would never be able to get ahead as easily. So make use of this valuable information from others. It is available for free in the form of

- freebies
- emails
- courses
- ebooks and a whole lot more

Want to know the best way to tap into these resources:

start following the best bloggers and subscribe to their lists. Easy as that!

And more importantly than signing up:

- open their emails and newsletters
- read every word
- and then take action

You will find a ton of useful and free advice here – tips not shared anywhere else!

And to make the deal even sweeter:

the established bloggers frequently share

- special deals
- discounts and
- sales on their own and others' products.

Take the Next Blogging Step

But, even if like me, you spend a couple of months to collect every single available piece of blogging advice out there, you will reach a point where you need more expert advice to continue growing.

This is where paid courses and ebooks have its place. Don't be scared to invest in yourself if you are taking blogging seriously.

The information contained in paid sources is rarely found for free and this is the type of advice you really need to take your blog that extra step forward.

So, if you haven't started your blog yet, take that leap of faith and start today. You won't regret it! I also contemplated the idea for a long time. But not even for a second have I regretted my decision to jump in and start blogging.

Invest in your Blogging Future

I invested in some paid courses and there is still quite a few I would love to do. You, probably like myself, cannot afford to buy each and every available course and that is why I recommend the best courses here to get you started in each of the most important blogging fields, including:

- starting a blog
- traffic growth
- list building
- monetizing and more

My best suggestion is that you try and invest in a good course as and when you need it. Don't try to buy everything up front as you will be completely overwhelmed and not able to get your money's worth from it.

Best start-a-blog tip ever

Invest in at least one solid get-your-blog-started course.

It is very important to start right. It will save you from a lot of headaches later to try and fix issues like a bad website host or theme choice. This is what this blog post is all about today. Not my expert advice, but my sharing of expert resources to help you excel as a new blogger.

Using these brilliant resources will:

- skyrocket your blog traffic
- increase your affiliate marketing income
- and help optimize your social media marketing strategies.

Please note: the list below is in no specific order. It is definitely not in order of preference, nor related to the magnitude of blogging wealth, but simply listed in frame with the time I connected with each brilliant blogger.

Each and everyone mentioned here had a tremendous impact on me as a new blogger. And I would not be here today writing about my journey if it wasn't for these awesome bloggers sharing information to support new bloggers to succeed. So be sure to learn from the best and get that dream blog started!

Sharing the Best of the Best

The resources you will find below are all

- super affordable and
- worth every cent.

I only recommend content that I truly believe in and use myself.

And, I know you will love it just as much as I do. All the bloggers having a significant impact on my blogging journey are listed here. You will find:

- links to their website
- their best freebies and
- their top courses.

Best New Blogger Tips

Carly is a no-nonsense blogger who has a profitable blog and is happy to share her knowledge with new bloggers. Subscribing to her blog will keep you up to date with the best and newest Pinterest and blogging strategies. Check it out today!

Personal Advice from Carly

“My best tip for new bloggers is that they should just go with the flow. If you find something that works for you and your audience, do more of that thing! Don't just assume that because there is a “right way” to do something, or that you have to do something just because that's what “everyone else is doing”.

Maybe a broad topic blog works better for you than a super niche blog... or maybe you don't want to use Instagram, and that's ok because Pinterest is going great for you! Just do more of what works FOR YOU.”
